Pin and Needle.
Ethel Sanderson, of Boston, is the daughter of a wealthy commission man. She is highly educated and has traveled in Europe, and is an accomplished linguist and musician. She can cook an eight course dinner without aid, and can keep house better than her maiden aunt, who has done nothing else for forty years.
Matilda Moore, of Greenfield Springs, Colo., has killed three mountain lions, can ride as well as any cowboy, and is an accomplished pianist. Her father took her west four years ago from Boston to save her life. She is now healthy and happy.
James DeBergh, of Kingston, Jamaica, has refused thirty-seven offers of marriage. June has $1,000,000, and is an orphan. She does not think she can afford a husband who cares only for her money.
At social gatherings, the following three topics should be avoided—dread, disease, domestic affairs.
Amelia B. Edwards wears her hair brushed off her forehead so as not to be confounded with Annie Edwards, the novelist. She is quite well favored, despite a nose that tip tips, and her eyes are set with a view to exploration.

Waxed paper bags are a new idea for holding coffee, fruit, confections, etc. They are also useful for packing fur and woollens away from moths, the paraffin coating rendering them both air and water tight.
What ladies may be said to give tone to society—the belles.
At least 60 per cent. of the multitude of typewriters in Chicago are women, as are 25 per cent. of the typewriters, 50 per cent. of the typewriter operators, and perhaps 70 per cent. of employees in dry goods stores.
With Scotch ladies golf is as popular as cricket in England.
The continued use of Persian insect powder will drive moths away from furniture. Its frequent renewal is necessary until all are killed.

The Manchoo Belle's Dowry.
About the most curious of all sources of fur are the dog ranches of Manchoo Factory. The animals, of peculiar gray shaggy breed, are raised expressly for their hides, four of which make the favorite Tartar robe. Each Manchoo belle, who goes home to housekeeping, is expected to fetch her husband at least a dozen, which she has herself prepared while in her father's house, as the girl of civilized regions laid up stores of goods linen and a year old, and are fed mainly on the flesh of their predecessors. Some philosophers declare that nothing is lost or can be lost. A dog ranch run on the Manchoo principles seems to exemplify the saying to a nicety.
Russia, the fur bearer, is also the fur wearer. The "White Czar" wraps him in priceless sable, the Mougli lives and dies in his sheepskin coat. From St. Petersburg to Sevastopol a royal path might be paved with fur. The commonest sleigh is heaped with fur robes, and in all the houses of the rich they meet you at every hand. Certain provisions send every year to royalty all the best of their yield. Select skins go into the royal treasury, and when there is a royal or imperial wedding the bride gets such robes of sable and blue fur as no other woman could ever wear. They are not born, however, but the poverty of the house-to-be guarded, given and entailed like land, jewels or plate.
On the whole, the American girl who gets muffs, cape and box no doubt has more solid satisfaction in them than the royal bride have in all their sheer splendor.—Cor. St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

Emerson and the Alcotts.
Emerson was a noble friend of the Alcott family. He had a way of leaving money in their house under books and other secluded places where it would be found. When one of the father's conversations yielded $40, Miss Alcott credited Emerson with $40 of the money. He was the god of her idolatry, she declared in 1890, and had been for years. As her sister's wedding he kissed the bride and her. Alcott thought this honor "would make even matrimony endurable." On the death of Emerson she wrote as follows in her journal:
"Our best and greatest American is gone. The nearest and dearest friend father has ever had, and the man who has helped me most by his life, his books, his society. I can never tell all he has been to me—from the time I sang Mignon's song under the window a little girl and wrote letters to a Bettine to him, my death, at 15, up through my hard years, when his essays on 'Self Reliance,' 'Character,' 'Compensation,' 'Love' and 'Friendship' helped me to understand myself and life, and God and nature. Illustrations and beloved friend, good-by."—Boston Herald.

Foolish Inventions.
A person who is not interested in patents would be surprised at the number of foolish inventions brought in by cranks who think they have discovered a valuable article or machine. Some of the inventions are very amusing. I know an old man, who has brought to me for inspection several inventions of his own, and nearly all of them are practically worthless. A few of them might, if improved upon, lead to favorable results. He is very industrious, and has something new every day or two. Not long since he brought in what he claimed was a perpetual motion machine, but the power was furnished by a spring, and it required winding, the same as a clock. He also studied out a faucet for hydrants, which, when turned to the right, discharges filtered water, but when turned to the left it discharges the water with its native dirt and impurities.—Inventor in St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Punctuation.
It is strange that the use of points for purposes of punctuation should be such a comparatively modern invention. Of the four generally-used points only the period (.) dates earlier than the fifteenth century. The colon (:) is said to have been first introduced about 1485, the comma (,) some thirty-five years later, and the semicolon (;) about 1570. It is difficult to understand how the literary world dispensed for so many centuries with the useful points, and their lack must have added to the toil of the decipherer of written documents. When we remember what curious inversions of meaning may be caused by the misplacing of a comma, we marvel how early authors contrived to escape strange misreadings of their works, in which no points guided the students.—London Standard.

We Knew It All.
The builders tell a rather interesting story of a Buffalo capitalist who was pretty smartly taken down by trying to sell himself up as the end of all things in whatever he undertook. No matter what he was on foot, if he went into it he must have all the say and nobody else was allowed even a side remark. Not long ago he built a fine brick house. In this undertaking, as in all others, he was boss and all without the slightest hesitation. At last they grew very tired of the brooding they had to stand and let him have his way whether it was right or wrong. The house was finished and shortly afterward the owner set about building furnace fires to test his heating apparatus, when behold, there wasn't a chimney in the house!—Exchange.

Quite Sufficient.
The hop and the german, the mad social whirl, will soon entertain the society girl.
But the juvenile brother, with natural wit, pronounces the snowball sufficient for him.

POCKET DOCKETS.
Can be Used in Any State and in Any Court.
The most complete and convenient Pocket Docket ever published, with two indexes—an alphabetical index and a diary index; shows at a glance just what date a lawyer has a case in court; keeps a complete record of the case. Handsomely bound in flexible back, a convenient size to carry in the pocket. Endorsed by attorneys everywhere. The following are a few of the many testimonials:
The following strong endorsement from Capt. John E. Ash, ex-judge of the 20th Judicial District, state of Indiana. He writes as follows:
WICHITA, Kan., Oct. 26, 1889.
It is the most complete and concise work of the sort I have ever met with. I cannot see how the systematic, practicing lawyer can do without it. It should be entitled "The Lawyer's Vade Mecum."
Truly and sincerely yours,
JOHN E. ASH, ATTY. AT LAW.
